The March for Science, an annual event for science advocates from a diverse array of fields and geographic locations, was recently held in Washington DC. The purpose of this march is to “create tangible change and call for greater accountability of public officials to enact evidence-based policy that serves all communities.”

One of the objectives of The MindReset (TMR) community is to forward social justice and health equity by amplifying the voices of those who have been or feel silenced. As part of TMR community outreach effort, members of TMR attended the march in solidarity.

Jing Wu, a TMR Core Team member, had a #TMR (total mindreset) moment when she learned from the Cool Effect booth that specifically carbon dioxide (CO₂) damage is not visible to the human eye, but rather pollution as a whole is what is witnessed in the sky.

TMR appreciates the Cool Effect's mission to reduce carbon pollution. Some of their messages include: "You Produce It, You Can Reduce It" and "Fight Climate Change or Die Frying."
